Restore NY Communities Initiative: Background

Seeking Council approval to submit a grant application for $5M to fund demolition and reconstruction as part of the Station Plaza Project in Jamaica, Queens

- New York State municipal grant program to revitalize communities and stabilize neighborhoods across New York
- Provides financial assistance for revitalization of urban centers through elimination and redevelopment of blighted structures
- Round 5 launched in September 2017
- Program Goals include
 - Revitalize urban centers
 - Induce commercial investment
- Each municipality may apply for up to $5 million but may only submit one project for consideration; Station Plaza in Jamaica was selected for the 2017 submittal
- Priority given to:
 - Projects in Empire Zones and Brownfield Opportunity Areas
 - Projects that leverage other state or federal redevelopment, remediation, or planning programs
 - Projects in economically distressed communities

Dear Speaker Mark-Viverito:

I wanted to explain why I believe that Int. No. 1661-A, passed by the Land Use committee today and scheduled for a Council vote on Monday, will be a step backwards for urban agriculture in New York City:

- (1) The bill does essentially nothing except compile existing information on a single website:
 - a. The zoning code is already very clear about urban agriculture. DCP testified to this and I wrote about it in Five Borough Farms.
 - b. The DCP website explains the services available from DCP for any person who has a question about land use.
 - c. The link to ZoLa can be found by searching on Google.
 - d. Other business resources are available on the SBS website.
 - e. DPR already publishes a list of urban agriculture spaces, as does the Office of Food Policy in its Food Metrics Report.
 - f. DCAS already discloses (pursuant to local law enacted by the Council over the administration's objections) vacant spaces that might be suitable for urban agriculture.
 - g. DPR's GreenThumb site already discusses city resources available for community gardens.
 - h. Information on how produce can be distributed is available to gardeners through various sites, including GrowNYC, Harvest Home, etc.
- (2) Because the bill adds no value to farmers and gardeners (and prospective urban agriculture entrepreneurs) it will be viewed as something merely meant to appear to advance urban agriculture, when in fact it does not.
- (3) Passing it on Monday will be a step backwards, not the first step towards a full plan, because the bill will make it more difficult to regain political traction. The administration will be able to argue that the Council's vote indicates that the website itself is adequate, and that it should be given the opportunity to launch the website, then to evaluate it, before taking any additional steps. This will likely delay any movement towards an urban agriculture plan by a year or more.
- (4) There are no goals stated in the legislation (e.g., "that it is the goal of the city to increase the scale of urban agriculture in NYC and to facilitate agricultural businesses") or any other language that advocates and entrepreneurs can point to as leverage to obtain support to grow their enterprises or to advance an urban agriculture plan.

(5) From a procedural perspective, the bill is so dramatically different than Int. No. 1661 (in fact, it bears no resemblance to 1661 in goals or requirements) that it should have been introduced as new legislation, not an amended version, and should have received two committee hearings before being voted on.

I urge the Council to consider withdrawing the bill from consideration on Monday or voting it down, in favor of resuming negotiations for an urban agriculture plan in the next Council session. I welcome the opportunity to work with you and your staff, and the urban agriculture community, to move a meaningful bill forward in the coming year.

Respectfully,

Nevin Cohen
