Whereas, The advent of the Internet has provided young people with a dynamic and revolutionary educational tool; and

Whereas, According to WebSurvey, the number of teenagers age 13-17 who actively use the Web will rise from 11.1 million in 1999 to 15.3 million in 2002; and

Whereas, The Internet is an invaluable and unique educational instrument which should be accessible in our City schools and libraries; and

Whereas, We must also be mindful that the Internet is a gateway to a wide array of material, some of which can be considered harmful to our youth; and

Whereas, The pornographic websites and images on the Internet are examples of the harmful material that is accessible by our youth; and

Whereas, It has not been shown that juveniles are using computer terminals at public schools and libraries to access pornography; and

Whereas, It has been proposed that the City schools and libraries institute a pilot filtering software program in order to prevent access to pornographic websites; and

Whereas, Filtering software has been criticized because it stifles legitimate research on the Internet; and

Whereas, It is unclear whether such software could be effective in preventing access to pornographic websites; and

Whereas, It is also uncertain whether the use of such software would violate the First Amendment; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Council of the City of New York calls upon the appropriate committee to hold an oversight hearing on Internet access by juveniles at public facilities.
