If, for any reason, the estimated time of arrival must change to a time outside the window of anticipated delivery time, the third-party food delivery service shall provide a notification to the consumer through their preferred means of notification that includes the updated estimated time of arrival, a new window of anticipated delivery time, and a reference to the original estimated time of arrival.

b. Where a third-party food delivery service employs, contracts or in any other manner engages the worker carrying out the delivery, it shall state in the receipt of order, any notification of delivery status or subsequent update pursuant to this section that the delivery worker is engaged by the third-party food delivery service.
