Whereas, The United States Congress has stated that "Tibet, including those areas incorporated into the Chinese Provinces of Sichuan, Yunnan, Gansu and Qinghai, is an occupied country under the established principles of international law and whose true representatives are the Dalai Lama and Tibetan Government-in-exile as recognized by the Tibetan people"; and

Whereas, The People's Republic of China seeks to absorb Tibet into China and is conducting economic development in Tibet contrary to the wishes of the Tibetan people; and

Whereas, The Tibetan Government-in-exile advocates economic development in Tibet but has recommended the following development guidelines for individuals and companies doing business in Tibet: (1) that development should be small-scale, decentralized initiatives in which Tibetans have control; (2) that development initiatives should be preceded by social, cultural and environmental impact assessments; (3) that any development which intensifies and promotes the transfer of Chinese to Tibet or which leads to the destruction of Tibet's fragile environment should be opposed; (4) that development projects should involve systematic and meaningful participation of the Tibetan people in all phases, including training, employment, design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation; and (5) that development projects should respect Tibetan cultural and social structures and the aspirations of the Tibetan people; and

Whereas, His Holiness the Dalai Lama, recipient of the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize, has repeatedly tried to conduct negotiations with China concerning the status of Tibet without preconditions, but China has refused to agree to these negotiations; and

Whereas, The Tibetan freedom movement is based on Buddhist non-violent principles, even in the face of brutal Chinese repression and the Tibetan people have called upon the world community to actively support their struggle for human rights, economic justice and self-determination; and

Whereas, The International Commission of Jurists recommended to the People's Republic of China to (1) enter into discussions with the Dalai Lama and the Tibetan Government-in-exile on a solution to the question of Tibet based on the will of the Tibetan people; (2) respect the fundamental human rights of the Tibetan people; (3) end those practices which threaten to erode the distinct cultural, religious and national identity of the Tibetan people; and
